

as rich
mations
eption,
ypical for

in central
drums,
Sa Huynh
s bells,
d in any

accom-
vers as
d vases,
ernail
fig. 11).
many
es in
ard to

Sa Huynh
popular
headed
exclu-
standing
or long-

5) were
d and
or a long
d be a
discovery
us of
people,
ed on
Tinh
luable
still do

on, and
lt sug-
nboring
e so

lain in
n B.C.,
ral Viet
e area
the end
ar to
B.C. The
m for
e classic
Nam

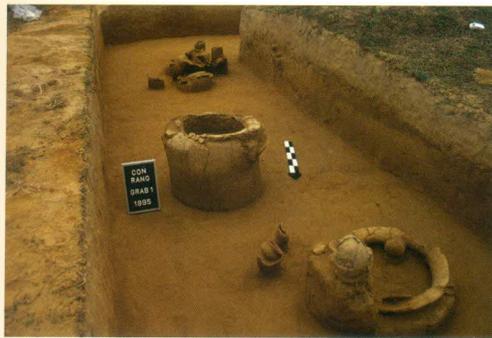

FIG. 8
Con Rang jar burial site of the Sa Huynh culture in Thua Thien-Hue Province, excavated in 1995.

FIG. 9
Five jar burials side by side: The Sa Huynh people used smaller jars to bury children (at the center), as is demonstrated at the Lai Nghi site by the discovery of children's teeth.

FIG. 10
In Lai Nghi, two pairs of split earrings were found in situ with a gap of 16 cm between them. This is the exact distance between the two ears of the deceased, whose bones have entirely disappeared in the sandy, lime-deficient soil. This burial feature is a rare indication of inhumations without a jar coffin in the Sa Huynh culture.

FIG. 11
This beautiful red-and-black painted, richly decorated pottery vessel was buried near the base of a large burial jar at Lai Nghi in Quang Nam Province.